Internet Archive was founded in 1996 by Brewster Kahle and began archiving the Internet itself, thus the name Internet Archive. This is our HQ in SF. The mission of Internet Archive has always been: "Universal Access to All Knowledge." Though much has changed since we began in 1996, the web can be the 'highway' for equitable access to cultural heritage for anyone with access to the internet.

Today we are a non profit digital library, with a growing amount of material. From software, movies, audio, to 5MM+ hours of television. We've scanned and made available more than 3 million eBooks. The collection we are often known for: more than 300 billion Web pages which can be accessed via the Wayback Machine.

Statement on Controlled Digital Lending by Libraries

Position Statement on Controlled Digital Lending

Last Updated September 2018

Introduction

This Position Statement on Controlled Digital Lending by Libraries ("Statement") offers a good faith interpretation of U.S. copyright law for American libraries considering how to perform traditional lending functions using digital technology while preserving an appropriate balance between the public benefit of such lending and the protected interests of private rights holders. This Statement only applies to in-copyright works, as public domain works may be distributed without restriction. This Statement is not intended to describe the upper limits of the fair use or other rights of libraries, bind the signatories to any legal position, or constitute legal advice. Because the following analysis is general, any library considering implementing controlled digital lending should consult a competent attorney to develop an appropriate program responsive to the specific needs of the institution and community.

Controlled Digital Lending ("CDL")

One of the most fundamental and socially beneficial functions of libraries is providing broad access to information by lending books and other materials to their communities. To lend materials more effectively, libraries can apply CDL to their collections in order to fulfill their missions. CDL techniques like those described in this Statement are designed to mirror traditional library practices permitted by copyright law.

Properly implemented, CDL enables a library to circulate a digitized title in place of a physical one in a controlled manner. Under this approach, a library may only loan simultaneously the number of copies that it has legitimately acquired, usually through purchase or donation. For example, if a library owns three copies of a title and digitizes one, CDL to circulate one digital copy and two print, or three digital copies, or two digital copies and one print; in all cases, it could only circulate the same number of copies that it owned before digitization. Essentially, CDL
